

ROOMING HOUSES TO HAVE LICENSES REVOKED

At the meeting of the board of city commissioners this morning, the recorder reported no protests against the ordinance No. 124, which is on Hudson avenue, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, nor any against opening Iowa avenue, which is on Madison avenue, between Twenty-second and Twenty-fourth streets, to be closed to the city engineer for improvements until spring.

Protests against proposed curb and gutter improvement in district 111, which is on Madison avenue, between Twenty-second and Twenty-fourth streets, were referred to the city engineer for computation.

On the recommendation of Chief of Police W. I. Norton, the commissioners authorized the recorder to summon the proprietors of the Fashion at 288 1-2 Twenty-fifth street, the Central hotel at 220 Twenty-fifth street, and the Glen at 2456 fifth street, to appear before the board November 10 at 3 p. m., and show cause why their licenses for conducting rooming houses should not be revoked.

In his communication to the board, Chief Norton states that he is prepared to prove that each of the places mentioned sells liquor without a license and that prostitution is practiced. He requested that the licenses be revoked and suggested that it would be well to give the parties a hearing before final action.

Interest on certain special taxes for curb and gutter, in the sum of $144, was remitted to E. Morrissey, agent for the J. H. Linehan estate.

An agreement between the city and C. V. Zinn respecting the rebuilding of curb and gutter facing Mr. Zinn's premises on Jefferson avenue, was adopted and filed. By the terms of the agreement, the city will rebuild the curb and gutter at the Zinn driveway to his home and he will build the driveway to conform to the city grade.

The request of the G. H. Tribe company to remove its liquor business from Twenty-fourth street to 2387 Washington avenue, was granted and the action of the board ordered certified to the judges of the district court.

On motion, the board designated Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock as the time to begin canvassing the returns of the recent city election.

The claim of A. G. Harris for $273 and that of County Recorder Thomas E. McKay in the sum of $10.85, were allowed and the auditor instructed to draw warrants for the amounts.

INSURANCE AGENCY COMPANY FORMED

The Preferred Insurance Agency has filed articles of incorporation in the office of the county clerk, stating the capitalization to be $10,000, divided into shares of the par value of $10 each. The incorporators and officers are:

Paul M. Lee, president; A. V. McIntosh, vice president and treasurer; E. L. Ford, secretary, who, with W. H. Poynt and John Browning form the directors. The purpose of the organization is to establish an agency for all kinds of insurance.

TROUBLES OF THE DRUNKS TOLD IN POLICE COURT

After M. J. Brown, charged with drunkenness, had pleaded guilty in Judge Reeder's court this morning and had expressed great sorrow that he should have done that which caused his arrest, he was given a suspended sentence. When the next case was called, John Doe also expressed great sorrow for getting drunk. He said he had been employed in the Tavern "Kafe."

"The what?" asked Judge Reeder.

"The kafe," replied Doe.

"Do you mean cafe?" queried his honor.

"Sure," replied the prisoner, "a restaurant."

When that point had been settled, the proprietor of a picture show stated that the Doe made himself obnoxious in his house.

The judge gave him five days or $5.

Of the two men who had preferred charges against each other only one, Alex Landfish, was present. Bud Read was again absent. The judge remarked that it did not look as though Read intended to push the charge against Landfish, so the latter decided to drop the case against Read. It is alleged that the two were fighting Tuesday afternoon. Each charged the other with disturbing the peace. Landfish stated in court today that Read is in the habit of insulting him when drunk only to apologize when sober.

After the attorney for Wada and Isidiguri, the Japanese merchants who are charged with receiving stolen shoes, had submitted his argument this morning, Judge Reeder again reserved decision. The attorney pointed out that the complaint charges the two with "knowingly receiving stolen goods," when it was his opinion that the two might suspect the goods were stolen but did not know they were stolen.

The special of Judge R. S. Lovett, chairman of the Union Pacific company, and his party did not stop in Ogden on the way east from Salt Lake City where the party remained last evening.

Arriving over the Short Line at 9:45 o'clock, the train was switched to the Union Pacific tracks at the southern end of the yards and was sent on its way to New York.

In the party are Judge Lovett, J. A. Munroe, vice president of the Union Pacific in charge of traffic; B. L. Winchell, traffic manager and others.

GOOD VAUDEVILLE AT ORPHEUM TODAY

The new Pantages vaudeville bill opens at the Orpheum with a matinee this afternoon and will play three days giving three shows daily. Some rare entertainment is promised in the new bill and after a week's vacation from vaudeville Orpheum patrons will no doubt flock to the popular house this week.

Headline honors this week go to the Bartlett, aerial gymnastic artists. These people perform numerous daring feats on the trapeze that thrill and amuse the spectator. The rapidity of their work is one of the features of the act.

Marie and Helen Hughes, two charming young ladies, come to a point of almost dividing headline honors on the bill. As specialists on the harp and violin they have an act that appeals to all classes. The young ladies rank high in musical circles and they have selected a most popular program to entertain.

James Brookman, who is said to be an exact counterpart of the famous English music hall favorite, Albert Chevalier, will be one of the features of the new bill. Mr. Brookman sings his own songs and with an excellent supply of comedy will be sure to score a big hit.

The De Von Sisters are clever singers and dancers. These young ladies have excellent voices and are good dancers and most important are good lookers. They have an excellent entertaining act.

The Mus Art Trio with singing, piano playing and rapid crayon sketches furnish a novelty act that is pleasing. One member of the trio has an excellent baritone voice and responds to a number of encores.

Harry Fischer and company, a comedy musical act, and the Gaumont weekly with new and interesting sights around the world will complete the bill.—Advertisement.

DEMURRER IN THE PINGREE CASE IS OVERRULED

Yesterday afternoon Judge F. C. Loofbourrow of Salt Lake advised Deputy County Clerk Harry Hales to make an entry that he had overruled the demurrer, in the case of J. S. Lewis against the Pingree National bank and that the defendants are to have ten days in which to prepare and file an answer. The judge also stated that he would be ready to hear the case on its merits about November 24.

This case has taken a circuitous route to get to issue in the courts, beginning in Judge Harris' court, from whence it was sent to Judge Howell's court, then back to Judge Harris, from there to the governor of the state and finally placed in the hands of Judge Loofbourrow. It is litigation of public concern and will be watched with interest.

STUDENTS AT HIGH SCHOOL TO GO ON A STRIKE

The next few days will see a struggle at the high school. There has been a strike. The boys of the student body will not attend general assemblies because Wallace Ruby, a popular idol of the school, has been expelled from such assemblies by Principal Henry Peterson. The test has not been made, but the boys claim they are strong enough to resist the temptation to attend the popular assemblies.

The trouble occurred last Friday during the football assembly. Ruby, who is the quarterback, retired from the game because of a broken shoulder, made a speech. He also endeavored to give an imitation of Principal Peterson making a speech. The imitation evidently was a success because the principal held that the speech was a violation of discipline. Ruby was ruled from the assembly and was requested to remain out in the future.

LITTLE TALKS ON BABYLOGY

By Anna Steese Richardson
Babies' Bureau, Woman's Home Companion.

Baby's Little Defects and How to Cure Them.

These little talks on Babylogy are not designed to take the place of the family physician in the home circle. They do not deal with remedies nor cures, but with the prevention of ailments which will assume such proportions that a physician must be called in.

Mothers—and doctors—are waking up to the realization that preventive medicine is the crying need among babies. The day when babies were supposed to "out-grow" certain disfigurements or tendencies to disease or weakness is past. Most of us can look back to the barbarous practice of soothing a baby with paracetic and then trusting to Nature to relieve the condition which made soothing necessary. We really seemed to think that a miracle would be worked while the baby slept!

If a baby had any terrible deformity or acute disease, we turned to surgeon or physician, but we took long chances with the baby who was merely good. We never stopped to figure that a good baby could be made a better baby by intelligent care, a better baby transformed into a well-nigh perfect baby. And yet parents owe the children they bring into the world precisely this care.

One of the most interesting features of the Better Babies Contests which have visited this fall has been the amazement of some mothers when they discovered that with oh, such a little care and attention, they could work such wonders in their babies.

As an example, in one city near New York, the physicians in charge of the examinations at a contest asked me if I would attend a meeting or "dress rehearsal" of the examination a few weeks before the contest. They wanted a demonstration of just how babies are examined by the Better Babies Standard score-card. So all the arrangements were made, the physicians agreeing to have a real baby on hand for a "model," to undergo the full examination.

The baby was scored precisely as if a regular contest was underway, and was penalized 5 for a rough skin and 15 for an eruption. The mother protested vigorously. The doctors showed her a fine eruption over the abdomen and under the arm pits. She declared that the child had always had the marks—they were a sort of birthmark. The doctors explained that such an eruption indicated overfeeding. Here was a bottle-fed baby, getting too heavy a fare. The mother admitted that she knew nothing about modifying the milk. The doctors told her how it should be done.

The roughness of the skin was due to mosquito bites, lots of them. The mother said she couldn't help that and neither could the baby. That was the fault of the mosquitoes! The doctors did not agree with her. They explained that the careful mother protected her child from mosquitoes with a netting, that mosquitoes carried disease, that the itching sores made the baby nervous.

The mother listened resentfully, especially when she saw that by the card her baby scored only 89. Nevertheless, she must have thought a great deal about what those doctors said, for when the real contest was held in her city six weeks later she entered her baby and it carried off a first prize, scoring 98 per cent.

The chairman of the committee in charge of the work wrote me that this mother had lightened the quality of the baby's food, and the rash had disappeared. She had cleared her house of mosquitoes and the baby's skin was smooth as a rose petal. Which shows that a Better Babies Contest makes mothers think—and act. Also, that a child can be made healthier and happier with just a little thought and attention.

At another contest where very large prizes were given, a mother came to me in tears. Her baby was a beauty, but she had a rash. She brought the baby to me to prove its beauty, doll-like features, absolutely classic in their fineness, delicate skin, soft, silken curls. And those stern doctors had said that the baby could not have a prize just because its teeth were dark and its stomach too big!

This "baby" was three years old. Its head should have measured 20 inches in circumference, its chest 21 and its abdomen 20. Instead, its head measured 19, its chest 21 1-2, and its abdomen 21 1-2. In a wee baby the abdomen is protuberant, but from two years on the chest should be larger than the abdomen. This indicates two things—that the child's respiratory organs are in good condition, with a fine chest development, and that the food is properly digested.

It took considerable questioning to find out why this pretty child was not in good condition, but in time got at the truth. The little girl loved candy. She inherited the taste from her father and they had indulged her because they thought she could not help it! The discolored, decaying teeth and the protuberant abdomen both resulted from over-indulgence in sweets. The mother was urged to reduce the amount of candy given the child not suddenly, but by gradually substituting sweetened fresh or stewed fruit, and then as gradually reducing the amount of sugar served with the fruit. This was seven months ago, and now the mother writes that the abdomen is smaller, the teeth in better shape and the child much less fretful.

It is shocking to see the number of children brought to contests who at three, four and five years have discolored, decaying teeth. The condition of the teeth is a sure indication of maternal care—or lack of it. Just as soon as the little teeth appear, they should be brushed. Baby-size tooth brushes, very soft indeed, can now be purchased. At first, the teeth should be brushed night and morning, not with a tooth paste or powder, but a very mild antiseptic like glyco-thymoline may be dropped into the water. The tiny teeth must be brushed up and down as well as back and forth, and special attention should be given to brushing the gums.

When the baby begins to go to table, or eat three meals a day in the nursery, the teeth should be cleaned after each meal.

Mothers often say in extenuation of the bad condition of the baby's teeth that it has had bad teeth from the beginning. Except in the case of constitutional disease and weakness, this is incredible. The baby's teeth come in strong and white. They are neglected and abused. If the teeth turn discolored and crumble, one of three conditions exist. They are not properly cleaned or the diet given the child is not right or the teeth are not used. The diet should be looked into by some one who understands the proper proportions of starch and minerals, of meat and vegetables, of mushy food and hard, of saccharine and acid. Just as soon as a child has enough teeth to chew with and has outgrown the choking age, he should be given well toasted bread, zwieback, and hard crackers to strengthen the teeth on.

If the teeth are in bad condition and will not yield to ordinary cleaning and sensible changes in diet, a doctor or dentist should be consulted. The health and shape of the permanent teeth depend on the care given in the first.

In visiting Better Babies Contests I have been shocked at the number of babies scored low for irregular features which might easily have been corrected in infancy.

The baby laid carelessly to sleep may grow up with mis-shapen ears. I have seen babies lying in bed with one ear curled forward. The wee baby is such a tender, pliable bit of flesh and blood. Just let it get into one bad habit of sleeping or lying, and it may be marked for life. When you lay it down, be sure that you lay back its ears smoothly and firmly.

Of course if a child has inherited protruding ears, this defect is not easy to overcome, but it can be helped or softened by having the baby sleep light from the start with a thin netting cap that will hold the ears not tightly but easily in place. Do not lay the baby down always on one side. Let it sleep first on the right, then on the left side. I have seen children of eight or ten years whose faces are asymmetrical—that is, larger on one side than the other and physicians say this may have come from always sleeping on the one side. Later in life when the form of the face is fixed, the adult may form any sleeping habit he likes, but the baby should be trained to sleep on either side.

Your child has a right to all the beauty you can endow it with. If your baby has thin eyebrows and lashes, try to encourage their growth. It can be done. Feed the eyebrows with a little cocoa butter, or vaseline. If you are very careful, you can even touch the lashes with a tiny camel's hair brush dipped in melted vaseline. I know a man and wife whose looks were marred by scanty lashes and colorless brows. When her babies came, this woman determined to do something to improve this unfortunate inheritance. She rubbed vaseline into the brows, had the lashes cut twice before the babies were three months old, asking the family physician, an excellent surgeon, to do this for her, and then she touched the roots of the lashes with melted vaseline. Her children now all in their teens, have beautiful brows and lashes.

It is absolutely criminal to let a child distort its mouth by sucking thumb or fingers. Let no mother deceive herself by saying that the habit is the child's great comfort, that it soothes and pacifies. In later years that child, especially if it be a girl, will call her mother to task for permitting the indulgence.

I have seen mothers actually start babies in this fatal habit of finger-sucking by giving them what is known as a "pacifier" or rubber nipple on a ring. It is natural for a baby to suck at something. He is born hungry. When he is very young, he will continue making sucking motions with his mouth after the breast or bottle has been taken from him. If he happens to whimper, the mother thinks the little sucking motion must be satisfied, she gives him the pacifier or actually sticks his thumb in his mouth, and the mischief is begun.

The tendency to suck the thumb is easily checked. From the very start, remove the thumb or finger and lay the little hand firmly down at the baby's side as he drops asleep. If he persists, then IMMEDIATELY, not after the habit is almost iron-clad, have him sleep with his hand in a mitten. It is never too soon to correct this habit. Better a crying baby today than a deformed daughter ten years from now. Thumb-sucking thrusts the teeth out, and in some cases gives the entire lower part of the face the shape of a rabbit's.

Many mothers ask me about badly shaped hands, and stubby fingers. Even these can be improved or remedied by patient care right after the baby is born. Smooth them firmly, steadily into shape a few minutes at a time, every time the baby awakens. Of course if bones are misshapen they cannot be changed, but the stubby fingers can be improved by pressure. If taken in time. But it does no good to rub the fingers one day and let them go three. It must be done patiently, regularly and gently, every day while the flesh, bones and nails are soft.

The next talk will be on fresh air and exercise for the baby.—Copyright, 1913, by The Woman's Home Companion.

SOCIETY

PRAYER MEETINGS.

Class prayer meetings of the Methodist church will be held as follows: Class No. 1 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reardon, 173 Thirtieth street; class No. 2 in the church basement, and class No. 3 at the home of J. W. Argobright, 2554 Quincy avenue.

RECEPTION HELD

At their hall in the Fraternity building last evening, Clara Barton division No. 237, G. I. A. to B. of L. E., held a reception in honor of the grand vice president of the organization, Mrs. M. E. Cassell. In the afternoon a session was held with the local members from Gilbert McLean division No. 108, Salt Lake City, and Rock Mountain division No. 102 of Evanston, Wyo., at which a large number of members were present.

The evening session opened at 8 o'clock when the chairman of the entertainment committee announced the program as follows:

The Misses Edna and Beatrice Hamill, violin and piano, duet; Miss Margarette McNulty, vocal solo; Miss Genevieve McNulty, piano solo; Mrs. Mary Jones vocal solo; Mrs. Mary Forbes, piano solo; Mrs. Edna Healy-Smith, vocal solo; Miss G. McNulty, piano solo; Miss Myrtle Shields, piano solo. The grand officer was then introduced. Her talk was very pleasing. Mrs. Cassell is possessed with a charming personality which endears her to all who meet her. E. O. Halsted, chief entertainer of No. 55, gave a very instructive talk, after which the guests were escorted to the beautiful banquet hall, where covers were laid for 75 engineers and their wives. The following committees are responsible for the success of the occasion, which will linger long in the memories of those who participated in the happy gathering: Entertainment: Mesdames A. Hastings, M. Jones, Invitation, L. Freeman, M. Healy, A. Vicks. Refreshments, L. Halsted, J. Wardleigh, A. Noble, E. Hinley, A. Davis. M. Neesly, M. McKillips. Reception: Clara Barton division, the grand vice president goes to Salt Lake City from here, where there will be a large delegation of Ogden members to witness something that is considered a very rare occurrence, the initiation of 32 candidates. The young ladies who served the guests in the banquet hall were: Misses Vera Jones, Pearl Wardleigh, Myrtle and Eleanor Shields, Beatrice Davis and Eleanore Healy.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Wheat was nervous and irregular today. Local pit conditions affected the market more than any other thing, as statistical data, at home and abroad, showed little or no change since yesterday. The influential buying at the opening, which was 1-8@1-4c lower to that amount up, gave an upturn to prices, but it was slight and did not last, the market sagging to yesterday's close or a fraction above.

Deaths and Funerals

TROUSDALE—Funeral services for Mrs. Teresa Marie Trousdaale were held in the Fifth ward meeting house yesterday afternoon with Bishop H. C. Jacobs officiating. The speakers were E. A. Shreve, President John Watson, President James Wether spoon and Charles Woodward. Miss Rhea Stevens and Miss Mary Jacobs rendered duets and Mrs. Mary Farley gave two solos. The interment was in the City cemetery.

HANSEN—Rasmus Hansen died at 1 a. m. today at the Dee hospital of Bright's disease. Deceased was a resident of Huntsville but was born in Denmark, August 29, 1882. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Christian Hansen, and a sister, Anna H. Bingham, survive. Remains are at the Lindquist parlors and will be prepared for shipment to Huntsville tomorrow where funeral services will be held Saturday at 1 p. m. from the Huntsville meeting house.

WADMAN—Ellen Ann Wadman, wife of Harry Wadman, died this morning at Logan from old age and general debility. She was born in Weber county July 13, 1867, but has been a resident of Logan for several years where her husband conducts a tin shop. Besides her husband a daughter survives. Remains will be shipped to Ogden, Saturday and will be at the Lindquist chapel at 10:30 o'clock, where the body will lie in state. Funeral services will be held Sunday at 2 p. m. from the Third ward meeting house, Bishop William Van Dyke officiating. Interment in Ogden City cemetery.
